

William Whittaker being her father. Her mother states that she knows Mrs. Gibson stole a large pig from a colored woman named Russell and traded it for three little pigs because she saw Mrs. Gibson's son and Whittaker put the pig in a little wagon and leave the farm, returning with three little white pigs which they said they had traded for the big pig. Her mother stated that on June 18th when the baby girl was born Mrs. Gibson sent her son, "Willie", down to her house at 149 Sydam Street, New Brunswick, and said: "Grandma, mother wants you to come up to the farm, she just had a baby." When she arrived, Mrs. Gibson was lying in bed and William Whittaker standing alongside. There was blood all around the bed and when her mother asked her what was the matter and what doctor she had, she said she just had a baby but did not have a doctor; that she just cut the string herself like she just cuts the pigs. She was in the one-room shanty near the front gate. Her reason for giving birth there was because she didn't want Bill Easton, the man with whom she was living, to know about it. She said to me: "Mother, you will have to take the baby home with you." She insisted and put the baby in a paper box. Her mother kept the baby for 9 days and then took it back to the farm where Mrs. Gibson told her it was Whittaker's baby. She never had the baby registered and, when asked why, she said: "No, I can't have her registered under the name Whittaker and I'll be damned if I'll have her registered under the name of Easton." Her mother said that she was sorry to say that her daughter was a bad woman from the time she was a little girl and would do anything for money. Jane Gibson is not her right name but she assumed this name when she bought the farm which
